Ádám (Eszter's brother) ceremony script:

Dear family members, friends, loved ones, and everyone who has become part of Eszter and Bálint's story in one way or another. It is my great pleasure to welcome you all here on this very special day. Allow me to introduce myself. My name is Ádám Ujvári, and I will be the one guiding today's ceremony.

I know the setting and the circumstances might be a little misleading, but I would like to clarify something important: I am not a registrar. I am Eszter's younger brother. It is a huge honour for me to be the person who brings these two people together today. Although I have to admit, I am facing quite a challenging task. Whenever something truly beautiful or emotional happens, I have a tendency to get a little overwhelmed. So I will need my full concentration today, and I apologise in advance if I happen to lose my composure for a moment. Today also marks the beginning of a small family tradition. At Bálint's sister's wedding, it was also a sibling who had the honour of bringing the couple together. And as we all know, if something happens twice, it can officially be considered a tradition - one occasion alone is usually not quite enough. We are all here today to celebrate Eszter and Bálint. To celebrate that two loving hearts found each other eight and a half years ago, and that they have decided to spend the rest of their lives together.

After many years spent together, Eszter and Bálint's relationship has arrived at this very special day.

They have shared countless experiences and have made countless decisions together. I am sure there have been easier ones and harder ones, good ones and challenging ones, but every single decision they made together has led them here, to this moment. Again and again, they chose each other. And now, after so many great decisions, they are about to make perhaps the best one yet. During eight and a half years together, you get to discover many different versions of another person. You see what they are like when they are incredibly happy, when they are excited about something, when they are completely exhausted, or when they are unbelievably stressed. You really get to see everything. For example, we can easily imagine Eszter after a full day of research, rushing through the crowded London Underground in the pouring rain to get to volleyball practice, while wondering whether she has drawn the right conclusions somewhere around page 400 of her PhD thesis. And then Bálint calls her and says:

"Imagine this... at our wedding next week, it currently looks like there won't be any chairs. Everyone might have to stand for the whole evening." I think we can all imagine that Eszter's reaction in that moment would be very different from, for example, waking up together peacefully on a sunny Sunday morning in London. Luckily, as we can see today, the chairs did arrive, and they managed to solve that problem as well. But just think about how many similar situations, difficult moments, and challenges they have already faced together. And the result has always been the same: they are able to look into each other's eyes with happiness and love, knowing that whatever happens, they can solve it together and they can always rely on each other. At the beginning of a relationship, this might come more easily. But after so many years, to still face everything with the same enthusiasm and calmness - that is something truly special.

The story of Eszter and Bálint began in the autumn of 2016, when they both moved to England at the age of 18 to begin their university studies at the famous Imperial College London.

They started this adventure separately. Before moving there, they did not know each other.

During their first year, while discovering a new country, new challenges, and new people, they also discovered each other.

Quite quickly, they built a close circle of friends around them, and within this group they had the opportunity to get to know each other better. At the beginning of their second year at university, they moved in together with two other friends. And from that point onwards, there were probably not many questions left about where this story was heading. It started with a simple thing: the four people living in the four-bedroom apartment drew lots to decide who would get which room. Bálint won the biggest room. And perhaps something was already happening in his mind at that point, because without hesitation, he gave that opportunity to Eszter. Not a small gesture. A few months later came the Christmas break, and they both travelled home. Still separately. Bálint went to Győr, Eszter went to Budapest, both returning to their families. The peace and comfort of home must have had an effect on both of them, because something happened that had not happened before in London.

They simply could not stay apart for long.

Those few intense days spent separately showed them both that maybe these days were not meant to be spent apart.

And so, in December 2017, they became a couple.

One thing I have always loved about this story is that two Hungarian young people had to move abroad, all the way to London, in order to meet and find each other.

But they had to come home - even if only for a few weeks - to take the first, and perhaps most important, step.

After that, they returned to London as a couple, continuing their studies and beginning to build their life together. Months and years passed, and even from the perspective of Budapest, it was obvious that they had truly found their place there. Whenever I met them, either when they came home or when I visited them in London, I always saw a balanced, happy, and seemingly unbreakable couple in front of me. And over the years, this only became stronger.

I think the first time I really got to spend a longer period of time with both of them was in the autumn of 2018, when I truly got to know Bálint. They spent a few days at our family home. At that time, I was finishing high school. Because I took studying extremely seriously, I was working on my maths homework that evening as well - until I got stuck. Usually, my wonderful father would have been the one to help me. But this time, it was Bálint who came to my rescue. And perhaps I was the most surprised when my trigonometry test the following day turned out to be particularly successful. Of course, this is just one small story. There are countless others that could be told. But every time we meet, I know one thing for sure: it will always be a pleasure to spend time together.

I would like to give the floor to Eszter first:

Eszter fogadalma:

Hello, ezt a beszédet angolul fogom mondani, részben azért mert van pár vendégünk aki messziről utazott és csak így értik meg részben pedig mert az angol nyelv nem annyira érzelmes. Remélhetőleg végig tudom ezt mondani sok pityergés nélkül ennyi ember előtt.

Bálinttal az Imperialon találkoztam a Senior Common room nevű szobában, mondhatni ez a pillanat volt a legjelentősebb hozzájárulás amit Imperial az életemhez adott. Elkezdtünk randizni, és Anya mindig tudta ha Bálinttal beszélek telefonon mert mielőtt felvettem volna már mosolyogtam. Az a pillanat amikor sejtettem hogy vele szeretném az életemet leélni pár évvel később történt, egy teljesen átlagos napon amikor csak ketten futkostunk az anyukája házában nevetve és hangoskodva.

Azóta te vagy az a hely ami otthonnak érződik. Bármit csináltam az mindig sokkal jobb volt ha veled együtt történt. Bármikor ha haza bicikliztem és láttam hogy te már ott parkolsz, az azt jelentette hogy otthon vagy és elmosolyodom mindig mert mindjárt láthatlak. Tudom hogy bármilyen akadályt az élet elének rak, együtt szembenézünk vele. Nagyon szeretlek és köszönöm hogy türelmes vagy helyettem is.

Nem ígérhetem meg hogy reggel csinállok kávékat nekünk mert mindig hamarabb kelsz fel mint én, de azt meg tudom ígérni hogy melletted állok és téged választalak mindig. Ígérem hogy mindig meghallgatlak és hogy támogatva szurkolok neked ha arra van szükséged. Szeretnék családot alapítani veled és alig várom hogy lássam hogyan játszódik le a kis életünk.

(Ádám) And now, please welcome Bálint's vows:

Bálint's vows:

My dearest love, my beautiful bride! In films it is often said, that love is the ultimate mystery, unexplainable by logic and common sense. Knowing you, I never understood this trope. I could give one thousand crystal clear reasons why I'm totally in love with you. I love your irresistible smile that spreads to any room. I love that if I manage to surprise you with a kiss, you always hiccup exactly once. I love your razor wit and humour, and I love that you are truly considerate, honest and brave.

Thank you for showing me how much easier it is to keep happiness alive if you share it with someone. When we walked together for the first time in the London rain under an umbrella, I remember my heart stopping for a moment. We cracked jokes and laughed together, not caring for the rain. We only noticed it ended when passersby started to give us looks: "What are these two loud Hungarians doing with an umbrella under the sun?". I promise you I will always care for and value what we found that day. I vow to be patient, honest and to persevere. I vow to walk with you when it rains, and when it does not, and I'll hold your hand all the while. Even if someone else is coming opposite of us, and we have to do an awkward shuffle to let them pass. I promise, that you can always count on me, and that I really, really love you.

Back to Ádám - Fröccs Ceremony

I would like to take back the microphone for a moment.

The next part might be a little unusual, but it fits Eszter and Bálint's story incredibly well. We discovered a very interesting parallel between their relationship and a beloved Hungarian summer drink called fröccs.

It might sound strange at first, but let's take a closer look.

Fröccs is perhaps one of the simplest, yet greatest drinks in the world. It consists of two ingredients: wine and sparkling water.

Both are perfectly enjoyable on their own, complete drinks in themselves.

But when combined, something completely new and special is created.

And during this process, neither of them loses its own identity. You can still taste both ingredients perfectly.

The same is true in a relationship.

Personalities and habits mix together. We learn from each other and take certain things from one another.

But individuality does not disappear.

Instead, two people create something greater and something new together.

In Eszter and Bálint's case, it is quite easy to decide who represents which ingredient.

Eszter represents the wine, because she has Tokaj roots on her mother's side, and her father's side of the family has lived in Etyek for many years — both are famous Hungarian wine regions.

And Bálint represents the sparkling water, because his great-grandfather was a soda water maker.

Depending on the mood, fröccs can be made with different proportions: less wine and more sparkling water, or more wine and less sparkling water.

Everyone knows the famous Hungarian versions such as the hosszúlépés, sportfröccs, viceházmester, or háziúr — all important parts of Hungarian culture and tradition.

However, when looking at the classic proportions, I often feel that something is missing. One part wine and two parts soda, two parts wine and one part soda, two parts wine and three parts soda, three parts wine and two parts soda...

But we rarely find one where wine and soda are present equally.

Of course, there is the kisfröccs, which is one decilitre of wine and one decilitre of soda. But honestly, it is a little bit too small and a little bit too simple.

So today, on this very special occasion, I thought we should create a new type of fröccs. A drink made of 2.5 decilitres of wine and 2.5 decilitres of sparkling water.

And I already have a name suggestion:

The HITVES Fröccs.

Representing equality and unity.

(Fröccs preparation)

I would like to encourage everyone to try this new drink during the evening.

You will be among the very first people to ever taste it.

And I promise that in the coming years, I will do everything I can to promote this new proportion and its name.

Ring Exchange and Kiss

We are slowly arriving at one of the most exciting parts of the ceremony.

The ring exchange.

The rings will be brought to us by a very dear friend, Kim, who has been part of their entire journey. Kim was the person who introduced them to each other for the very first time. On behalf of everyone here, thank you so much.

Now, please exchange your rings, which will from this day forward serve as symbols of your vows. We have heard beautiful promises today. These promises are commitments you have made to each other in front of your families and friends.

I hope that everything you promised today will always remain true.

And now, as the final - and perhaps most important - step, seal these promises with a kiss.

Closing

Eszter, Bálint.

Thank you for allowing me to be the person who brings you together today.

As your brother, I cannot imagine a greater honour.

Before we let everyone continue celebrating, allow me to take this opportunity to be the first one to congratulate you with a big hug.

I love you both very much.

Thank you all for being here with us today.

I wish everyone a wonderful evening.

Let's celebrate, enjoy ourselves, and I highly recommend trying the Hitves Fröccs!

Thank you again for being here.

LONG LIVE THE HAPPY COUPLE!

Address to Friends and Family during dinner

I would like to start with an honest thanks to everyone for being here. Thanks to those who travelled to join us across borders, and thanks to those who welcome us every time we come here as if we never left. Eszter and I are incredibly grateful for all the love and help throughout the years but also today; the delicious pastries from Eszter's grandmas and my Mom, all these wonderful plants that my parent's let take over their gardens like a jungle for us, for late night arts & crafts to putting together the seating cards with Eszter's parents (and also this booklet you are reading now! Hello!). Thank you to Yvette for the gorgeous greeting board, for the multiple people running around to buy up the country's entire stock of these beautiful table runners on clearance, and I really could keep going on... in short, thank you.

I'm not saying anything groundbreaking with this, but it's worth repeating: Spending good days, like today, together with our loved ones is one of the most precious things in life. However, even hard days are made sweeter if we get to spend it with lovely people like you. In my childhood, I'll never forget making bootleg soap opera movies with my siblings or playing boardgames as a family. However, even when it was my mother's turn to pick a boardgame, and she chose cleaning the house or harvesting fruit together, I still have many good memories from working together. With Eszter too, we have pulled all-nighters to finish our theses together, rushed to decipher the instructions on a coin-operated Icelandic carwash, and hobbled through a half-marathon together (which I think legally counts as one full marathon, now that we are married), all of which only made our love stronger. Now we have the wonderful joy and privilege of joining our two families together, to similarly share good and bad times together.

We prepared a small gift for our parents to commemorate the gorgeous time we had last month celebrating the civil wedding in the UK in the form of an album. If you are thinking to yourself, "Wait, what about the pictures from today? Wouldn't it have made more sense to compile the pics from both weddings in one bigger book?" Well, yes, good point, but let me offer this as a toast: I wish all of you have memorable moments with your loved ones often enough, that by the time the album from previous get-together finishes printing, you already have to make the next one. Cheers!

Ákos beszéde /Speech by Ákos (Bálint's brother)

Drága öcsém, Eszter!

Nagyon örülök, hogy megtaláltátok egymást, és hogy meghoztátok ezt a nagy döntést, hogy összeházasodtok. Szerintem nagyon jó kis helyszínt és társaságot választottatok arra, hogy ezt megünnepeljük.

Szerelmetek számomra az elejétől kezdve nagyon különleges, megértő, mégis állandóan viccelődő, szerető kapcsolatnak tűnt, és tűnik a mai napig is. Egyik legkedvesebb emlékem talán a kapcsolatokról az, amikor éppen látogatóban voltam nálatok Londonban, és Eszter, neked sokáig kellett dolgoznod, ezért nagyon későn értél haza. Amikor felhívtad Bálintot, és mondtad neki, hogy mi történt, hogy most nagyon sok a munka, és emiatt túlóráznod kellett, Bálint nagyon megértően csak annyit mondott, hogy sajnálja, és hogy vár majd haza. Kívánom, hogy legyetek mindig ilyen megértőek és támogatóak egymással, és majd a jövőbeli kis családokkal is, ha úgy alakul. 😊

Van egy viccelődős példám is, amikor például Bálint felhívta Esztert, és csak annyit mondott neki, hogy: „Ne haragudj, most nem tudok beszélni, majd visszahívlak.” 😊

Eszter pedig értetlenül, kicsit, de nevetve állt a helyzet előtt.

Nem is olyan rég még kisgyerekként játszottunk Lillával közösen Szerdahelyen a kertben, ahol Csöpi masszírozott, vagy éppen művészfilmeket csináltunk. A Batthyányi parkban futkároztunk, vagy a lakásban, a közös szobánkban Heroest vagy Resistance-t játszottunk. Volt idő, amikor te nézted, hogy játszom én, azóta már gyakrabban nézem én, hogy játszol te, vagy éppen min dolgozol most.

Sok víz lefolyt a Dunán. Ebben a nagy melegben rajtunk is. Van, ami megmaradt, és van, ami változott. Mi is és ti is sokat változtatok az elmúlt időkben, lediplomáztatok, és most kezdték a nagybetűs életet. Kívánom nektek, hogy minden az elképzeléseitek szerint alakuljon. Ránk továbbra is mindenben számíthattok. Nagyon szeretlek titeket! Sok boldogságot, és táncoljunk ma hajnalig!!!

My dear brother, Eszter,

I'm so happy that you found each other and that you've made this wonderful decision to get married. I think you chose a fantastic venue and the perfect group of people to celebrate this special day with.

From the very beginning, your relationship has always seemed very special to me—full of understanding, love, and a sense of humor that you never seem to lose. One of my favorite memories of your relationship is from when I was visiting you in London. Eszter, you had to work very late that day and came home much later than expected. When you called Bálint and explained that work had been incredibly busy and you had to stay late, he simply said how sorry he was and that he would be waiting for you at home. I wish that you will always be this understanding and supportive of each other, and one day of your future family as well.

I also have a funny example. Once Bálint called Eszter and simply said, "Sorry, I can't talk right now. I'll call you back." 😊 Eszter just stood there, slightly confused, but laughing at the situation.

It doesn't feel that long ago that Lilla, you and I were little kids playing together in the garden in Dunajská Streda, where Csöpi was giving massages, or making our own "art films." We ran around in Batthyányi Park, or spent hours in our shared room playing Heroes or Resistance. There was a time when you watched me play; nowadays it's more often me watching you—whether you're playing a game or working on something new. A lot of water has flowed down the Danube since then. In this summer heat, quite a lot has flowed over us as well. Some things have stayed the same, while many things have changed. Both we and you have changed so much over the years. You graduated, and now you're beginning the next great chapter of your lives together.

I wish you that everything turns out just as you dream it will. You can always count on us, no matter what.

I love you both very much. Let's dance till the sun comes up!
